Lexington College Features Bounty of the Midwest Open House Event

CHICAGO – Lexington College hosted the “Taste of Lexington” event on Thursday, March 12 at the West Loop campus. This year’s theme, “Bounty of the Midwest” focused on fresh, natural flavors. The College welcomed over 200 guests including prospective students, families of current students, and executives of hospitality related businesses in the Chicagoland area.

The event provided an opportunity to meet students, faculty and staff, tour the campus, and enjoy hors d’oeuvres prepared by Lexington students.

Bruce Kraig, an internationally recognized food historian, host and writer for a series of award-winning food documentaries signed copies of his new book, Hot Dog – A Global History. Other events included tours of Lexington’s facilities, culinary lab demonstrations, interactive food stations and internship presentation displays.

We express gratitude for the commitment to those who helped to make this event possible. Sponsors included Kellogg’s Specialty Channels, Maui Wovi Hawaiian Coffee, Gordon Hanrahan Advertising and Trade Relations, Liif Tea, and Noodles & Company.

Why Lexington?

Lexington College, the world’s premier all-women’s hospitality management degree-granting colleges, educates students to work in all aspects of hospitality management.
